Conference focusing on beneficial use of by-products set for November 4-5

A conference focusing on the beneficial use of by-products is set for November 4-5 in Atlanta.

The Southeast Industrial By-products Beneficial Use Summit is sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) Region 4 in association with the Southern Waste Information eXchange, Inc.

The two-day conference targets the growing interest by generators of high-volume, low-hazard industrial products to find acceptable reuse applications instead of paying significant disposal fees.

The Atlanta workshop builds on the success of a previous workshop held in Chicago by U.S. EPA Region 5 and provides discussion opportunities for generators and end-users of industrial by-products with market development officials, state and federal regulators and researchers.

The cost of the workshop is $75 and the registration form is available on-line at <http://swix.ws/upload/Brochure.pdf>.

For more information about the workshop or to register, call Ray Moreau at 1-800-441-7949.
